JOE'S CORNER

Last March, THE LOCAL joined our brothers and sisters of the construction trades on a picket line at Oakland University (OU) because of their nonunion construction practices. There were several professors who stopped their cars at the picket line to ask what was happening only to proceed through. Fast forward to the end of August when the professors set up a picket line asking the university to provide fair wages and benefits as opposed to spending money on fancy administration buildings. Wouldn't it have been nice for the teachers to join the construction trades and vice versa? For unions to be relevant, solidarity needs to exist and communication is the key. THE LOCAL has been committed to bringing union leadership together every September for an event called 'The Battle of The Locals.' It is our way to ensure all union leadership has access to one another. That is the difference between THE LOCAL and every other financial institution.
